

Linos Voskarides made a Master's degree in Public Administration in the "Université des Sciences économiques d'Aix-Marseille" in 1997 and in international trade and transport in 1999.

From 1999 until 2004, he worked for different companies in the field of maritime transport and logistics, where he was coordinating the daily operations of multimodal transport as well as handling the cargo insurances and other legal issues.

In January 2005 he joined the European Commission, where he first worked as finance officer for the structural funds in the Directorate General for the Regional Policy and later as project officer in the Directorate General for Home affairs, where he was responsible for the Schengen Information System (IT system for the border control in the Schengen area).

Since 2013, he is a policy officer in the Directorate General for Mobility and Transport – Rail Unit, in charge of the telematics applications and he is the secretary of the TAP/TAF Steering Committee that meets four times per year.